Model Manner of Settling a Large Estate. Seth Thomas of Hallow, Connecticut, left at the time of his decease, eighteen months ago, property worth from $400,000 to $600,000, and six children who were his heirs. There was no will, and the estate descended in the legal manner to the children equally. They consulted no lawyers, began equally. They consulted no lawyers, began no scramble, but mutually agreed upon two judicious men, and employed them to divide the property into six portions as nearly equal in value as possible. This done, the portions were put up at auction among them, each were put up at auction among them, each buying a portion, and the premiums again were equally divided. In this way the peace of the family circle was preserved, and an end arrived at which gratifies every pure sentiment. were put up at auction among them, each

(F An old English burglar died in Meredith village, a few days since, possessed of considerable wealth. He had lived for many years a life of strict propriety, much respected by his neighbors and friends, and had reared a large family. He left a manuscript in cipher, which proved to be a record of his misdeeds. In his will he bequeathed $800 to a man once robbed in Quebec, and two grandsons of the individual have been found there, he having long since died.

The Southern students in the New York medical schools had a meeting on Friday evening and voted to go home as soon as any Southern state secedes. They were urged to go at once by several Southern gentlemen, among them Col. Dick of Maryland, who was introduced as "the man who gave Brooks the cane to whip Sumner with." dispatch was received from Richmond, Va., inviting the students to go there, where a rival medical college exists without flourish-

Telegraphic blunders are sometimes as funny as they are serious. Thus, one Mr. Brown, a prominent gentleman, being ill at Toronto, it was telegraphed to his family that "Mr. Brown is no worse." The family got it "is no more," and sent up a special train for the remains. A young lady was taken sick while visiting in Cleveland, and the good folks were dumb-founded wit the report that "she has had a child." It should have "she has has had a child." It should have been "has had a chill."

A Danbury man, who felt a little inclination of an appetite, went into a New Haven saloon the other evening, and ate five oyster stews, one plate of raw oysters, one plate of sausages, a codfish ball, three cups of custards, one large plate of pudding, and drank three glasses of cider and six glasses falling from the head.
